14. Dallapiccola: Quaderno musicale di Annalibera: IX. Colore

Despite the playful title, the music on Andrew Rangell's latest Steinway label release is actually quite serious, even austere and cerebral. While Atkinson's canons and Bach's duets will surprise with their immediate elegance and eloquence, Dallapiccola and Wolpe supply the kind of meaning and beauty requiring more sustained attention. With that, these pieces will yield much in the way of color, wit, sensuality, and poignancy.

"Listeners will at once notice Rangell's anything but metronomic tempos and the extreme suppleness of his phrasing."
